The clock tower

In a wonderful village there was a clock tower. It had beautiful bright houses and colourful balloons. The grass on the field was very shiny ^{and waving} up there ^{was} a clock tower with a ballerina moving the clock gracefully. She had a sparkly cog on her dress ^{because some flowers she was wearing}. She unlocked herself from the clock to ^{look out to} look out of the window. So she ^{decided} ^{down} decided to go downstairs, and she opened the door but when she was not in the clock tower every thing turned grey. When she touched the balloon it went colourful but then it went grey again. So she went back up to the clock tower and put her back in place then started spinning again and the colours all came back. The End.

The clock tower

In a wonderful village there was a clock tower. It had beautiful bright houses and lots of colourful balloons. The grass on the field was very shiny and waving. Up there was a clock tower with a ballerina moving the clock gracefully. She had a sparkly cog and some daisy on her dress. She was wearing a cog because she was the key to the clock. She unlocked herself from
